

Cease to Exist

Why does the repetition of a word
make the word cease to exist?

Spoon, spoon, spoon.
Is spoon still a word?
What about dog
dog, dog, dog...

What part of the brain collects words
then tosses them out when they are relentlessly repeated over and over?
Is it even the brain that does this?

Could it be my conscience that decides?
Or is it my soul that declared spoon no longer a word
after I kept repeating it and repeating it?

What about names?
Will the name Sam just become three letters placed in the order S-A-M?
Sam, Sam, Sam, Sam.

Can object words cease to existence as fast as name words?
Spoon, spoon, spoon
Sam, Sam, Sam
What separates a word echoed from the rest?
